CANDOR WITHOUT PARALLEL.

MAN FELL FORTY-FIVE FEET WITH. OUT INTERNAL INJURIES.

Attorney E. C. Meservey's Refreshing Exhibition of Frankness-Is in Sharp Contrast With the Usual Allegations.

Attorney E. C. Meservey gave a refreshing exhibition of fairness and candor in Judge Scarritt's court yesterday. He was the attorney for Fred D. Allen, a young painter, who was hurt by the falling of a scaffolding on which he was working. He received serious injuries, among which were a fracture of both ankles, a sprain of his back, and internal injuries. Allen fell from the top of a three-story building, a distance that the capacity of a litigant. Several suits are pending in which the payment of the insurance is demanded, the companies setting up the ground that the mills were set on fire. Mr. Gudgell is not not painted to the chrisman-Sawyer bank of nidependence. One of these suits has been decided for the bank, exonerating Mr. Gudgell of any incendiary acts.

Now come F. S. Phillips and other woolen dealers in the fast, who sue Mr. Gudgell for $800 worth of woolen goods which they claim were secured on fraudulent representations as to the solvency of the mill company. The suit is on trial in Judge Sover's weet of the insurance is demanded, the companies setting up the ground that the mills were set on fire. Mr. Gudgell is not policies to the Chrisman-Sawyer bank of decided for the bank, exonerating Mr. Gudgell for any incending in the payment of the insurance is demanded, the companies setting up the ground that the mills were set on fire. Mr. Gudgell for any incending in the companies setting up the ground that the mills were set on fire. Mr. Gudgell for any incending in the companies setting up the ground that the mills were set on fire. Mr. Gudgell for any incending in the companies setting up the ground that the mills were setting u back, and internal injuries. Allen fell from the top of a three-story building, a distance of forty-five feet, and sued Osborne & Pitrat and others for damages.

In his statement to the jury Mr. Meservey declared that while internal injuries were alleged in the petition, yet he would be frank with the jury and say he did not believe they were serious, the chief injuries being to the ankles and the back of the plaintiff.

If the usual ratio of injuries in damage

If the usual ratio of injuries in damage suits had been maintained, the plaintiff would have received internal injuries which would have incapacitated him for several generations. An ordinary fall on a sidewalk is usually sufficient to produce a violent and permanent derangement of a plaintiff's 'innards.' A fall of ten feet is enough to cause floating kidneys and meandering lungs, while a fall of twenty-five feet is usually sufficient to cause most of the vital organs to be loosened from their moorings and bring out a flood of expert medical testimony.

testimony.

But here is a plaintiff who falls forty-five feet, and his attorney frankly declares that he does not base his claim for damages on any mysterious and hypothetical internal injuries. The case will be concluded to-day.

WHY IT GETS "OFF THE TRACK." Legal Questions Have "Vexed, Hampered and Derailed" the County Court.

The county court has frequently got "off the track." but not until vesterday has a good reason outside of Democratic gang politics been suggested. Attorneys Ciem-ents and Paxton & Rose, of Independence, acting for J. W. Ryan and other property acting for J. W. Ryan and other property owners, brought mandamus proceedings yesterday to compel the court to reinstate the petition for a certain country road which the court refused to order improved. In the petition the circuit court is asked to "settle the questions which have vexed, hampered and derailed the county court. The use of the word "derailed" in this connection is a peculiar one, and is the only tangible excuse for the court's getting "off the track" so often.

CONVICTION IS LOOKED FOR DEFENSE PRESENTS A WEAK CASE FOR THE KILLING OF HESS.

Previous Good Character of Wright Brothers Shown, but No Justification for the Crime Set Out-Arguments To-day.

The taking of evidence in the Wright murder case will end this forenoon, the arguments will begin to-day and probably will be finished before court adjourns tonight

The state finished its case yesterday morning. It was said by all who had heard the case presented by the state that it was very strong against the Wright boys. It showed that they killed John Hess without provocation, and it was a peculiarly cow-MAY BE ANOTHER MURDER. ardly and cold-blooded murder. The evidence for the defense was very weak. It consisted for the most part of testimony consisted for the most part of testimony about the previous good character of the Wright boys. An attempt to show that the Hess family was quarrelsome failed.

The buggy in which the Wright boys rode when they killed John Hess was introduced yesterday by the defense. The object was to show that the buggy top when let down was too high for Arthur Wright to shoot over when standing up. David A. Ball, attorney for the Wrights, jumped into the buggy to illustrate that point to the jury. Judge Wofford reprimanded him for it.

T. R. Cummings was the first witness for the defense. He testified that William H. Hess was a quarrelsome and dankerous was a quarrelsome and dangerou On cross-examination Mr. Wallae

"He was a quarrelsome man, was he?"
"Yes, sir."
"What dld he ever do to show that?" "He was quarrelsome."
"Used to fight, hey?"
"Yes. sir."
Mr. Wallace got up and sat on the table, pointed his finger at the witness and asked sternly:

"Who did he ever have a fight with?"

Mr. Cummings hesitated and squirmed around in his chair.

"Come, now, you say he was a turbulent, quarrelsome, dangerous man—who did he ever fight with?" persisted Mr. Wallace.

Still Mr. Cummings did not answer.

"Now, isn't it a fact that you never knew him to have a fight?"

"Yes."

"Yes." "You never knew him to quarrel, either,

"No. sir."
"Did you ever hear any human being say that John, who was killed, ever had a fight or threatened any one?"
"No. sir."

"No. sir."
William Smith testified that the Wright boys were peaceable, law-abiding men. On cross-examination he said old man Hess and his son, John, were peaceable and lawand his son, John, were peaceable and law-abiding, too.

Miss Mildren Smith, sister-in-law of the Wrights, testified to the good character of the brothers and that Dollie Hess told her she saw no part of the shooting.

Mrs. Lena Harker, another sister-in-law, testified to the same thing.

John Spealman testified that W. H. Hess had a reputation for being quarrelsome. On cross-examination Mr. Wallace asked him: "Wasn't Mr. Hess as much of a law-abid-ing citizen as there was in Prairie town-ship?"

ship?"
"Yes," answered Mr. Spealman.
Miss Grace Ware testified that the reputation of the Wright boys was good. On cross-examination Mr. Wallace asked her:
"You have a great interest in this case, haven't you?"
"Nothing speakel." "Nothing special."
"You would like to see them acquitted

wouldn't you?"

wouldn't you?"
"Yes, sir.
"You went up to the Wright boys, didn't you, and told them to trust in God and it would come out all right?"
"Yes, sir.
"You're the sweetheart of one of the Wright boys, are you not?"
"No, sir.
"After this the attorneys for the Wright brothers but a number of witnesses on the stand to prove the good reputation of the Wrights. Each of them testified, too, that the reputation of the Hess family was above reproach.
Several witnesses—Samuel Stone, Dan Miller, Walter Erwin and Milles E. Erwin—

Several witnesses—Samuel Stone, Dan Miller, Walter Erwin and Milles E. Erwintestified to what the Hess family had told them about the shooting right after it occurred. The testimony corroborated the evidence given by the Hesses on the stand, and, although it was introduced by the defense, it really strengthened the case of the state. The general opinion of court officials is that the jury will not acquit the Wright brothers. The conviction of both of them is looked for.

Mexicans Refuse to Be Wooed From Their Ancient Sport by Subsidized Playhouses.

has just returned from a month's trip through Mexico with an association of railway men, and had an ample opportunity of seeing what was going on.

"The government has caused to be built at the cities where bullifighting receives most attention, magnificent theaters, in which first-class companies are engaged to give the most attractive plays. The idea is to educate the people into some other way of finding pleasure than going to bullights. The theaters are very attractive, in fact, are as fine as can be seen anywhere, but it is noticeable that the audiences at the plays are quite small. The people appear to prefer the bloody and disgusting builfights to the plays. It shows the result of training and education. For years the people have been educated to look on buillighting as legitimate sport and the proper amusement for both men and women, and they are slow to quit it. Our party went out one Sunday down there to see a bullfight, because it is one of the sights of that country. None of us wants to see another, for it is bloody and brutal beyond all description."

Firearms Are Not Toys.

Two more deaths have lately resulted from "didn't know it was loaded" accidents—a mother killing her babe and a boy almost having his head blown off. Revolvers and guns are dangerous under all circumstances. Firearms are not toys. It is also unsafe to trifle with what are termed minor aliments. Insignificant though they seem at first, they are likely, if precautions against their further development are heglected, or they are unwisely treated, to develop into maladies of dangerous and complex magnitude. The best way is to arrest their progress at the start with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which checks constipation, liver complaint and rheumatism, malaria, kidney trouble and nervousness. A decline in health is something we cannot afford to disregard. Nature always exacts a severe penalty for continuous heedlessness of her warnings. Independently of its sterling efficacy as a specific for chronic maladies, the Bitters is a superb tonic and promoter of appetite and sleep.
